

Those who nominated her this year say:

Professor Johnson is a rigorous professor in the classroom who commands respect and equally respects her students. She expects from us as much as she provides and the work that comes out of her classes is rigorous and inspired at the very least.

I have learned through her work so much about myself and what it is I am passionate about. Professor Johnson works each day to provide her students with the tools to construct their future and I am eternally grateful.

In her class, I not only learned about the histories of people whose backgrounds are different from my own, I learned how to engage with people whose backgrounds are different from my own. She is the type of college professor that I always dreamt of having, someone who I can always trust as a person to challenge my thinking both inside and outside of the classroom.
