

Andreas Teuber is chair of the Brandeis University Philosophy Department and a professor of Philosophy. He has received, among other awards, a Fulbright Fellowship and a National Endowment for the Humanities Fellowship. His areas of focus include liberty, civil disobedience, interpretation of the U.S. Constitution, and multiculturalism and equality before the law. Teuber received an award in 2007 for one of the “Top 10 Most Popular Philosophy Syllabi in the World.” In 1967, he starred as Mephistopheles in Richard Burton’s Doctor Faustus.