Healthy communities through the transformative power of music, arts, organizing campaigns. Common Unity breaks cycles of violence and builds compassionate, justice, conflict resolution, social-emotional literacy, and community trauma-informed care, mindfulness, arts empowerment, restorative organizers, artists, and activists from around the country who are creating with and performed by four Philadelphia police and three Pendle Hill Quaker Studies Center, 338 Plush Mill Rd, Wallingford, PA May 6, 7:30pm Foundation (through the support of Naomi Sinnreich, P’13). Questions? Contact ethics@brandeis.edu

This summer, YOU can participate in a dynamic and highly interactive 40 hour experience of the major African-American holdup in history. A new work has been an integral part of the Ethics Center, as well as those fulfilled as an internship, directed study, special topics course, or capstone minor in CAST.

May 3, 1-2pm

Congratulations to Carmen Olaechea and her colleagues at IMPACT on March 28. It attracted over 130 participants from 32 countries and 7 continents. It was the highest turnout ever for the Virtual IMPACT Learning Exchange.

On April 26, over 20 leaders in ACCT around the world will be facilitating a free one-day global online exchange. This learning exchange is being designed by a team including Cindy Curnin, Kiaina Gomez, Remony Perlman, Jean Poulard, and Sarah "One Common Unity". It will take place for one full 24 hour period -- so please sign up knowing you can participate when it is convenient in your time zone. Details are below.

Dear Colleague,

We'd love you join us to share your work, your practice, and your questions about this growing field. You will learn more about what's happening locally and globally, and you'll get to connect with new perspectives from around the world.

Why should I be involved?

We welcome diverse perspectives from all aspects of the ACCT field. It will provide you specific instructions on registration and how to participate. If so, we'd love you to join us in a free one-day global online learning exchange on April 26th. You will have opportunities to participate in this exchange through our partner Peace Direct.

What will it cover?

The exchange will focus on the role that higher education organizations play in supporting ACCT. We'd love you join us to share your work, your practice, and your questions about this growing field. You will learn more about what's happening locally and globally, and you'll get to connect with new perspectives from around the world. For more information, please visit the IMPACT website.

When is it?

April 26th Virtual IMPACT Learning Exchange

How do I participate?

You can participate in the exchange by registering online at the IMPACT website. You will receive a confirmation email with instructions on how to participate.

Why do I want to participate?

The IMPACT Learning Exchange is a unique opportunity to connect with others engaged in ACCT work around the world. You will have the opportunity to learn from and share with others in the field, as well as engage with new ideas and innovation.

See you there!

Cindy Curnin, Kiaina Gomez, Remony Perlman, Jean Poulard, and Sarah Perlman