Focus on Careers:
GLOBAL STUDIES

Global Studies graduate study at Brandeis provides a broad perspective of global institutions, critical issues, and the complex ways that globalization affects specific regions and countries. Students are prepared to be global thinkers in business, education, government, and the non-profit sector. Global Studies students can pursue international careers in the U.S. or abroad by building upon skills such as functional expertise, language ability, or experience overseas. Careers are varied and may include working for the federal government, international service agencies, English-language teaching positions, multinational corporations, or employment in non-profit organizations.

POSSIBLE AREAS OF EMPLOYMENT

Communications and media
Culture and globalization
Diplomacy
Economic development
English-language teaching
Foreign service
Global environment
Politics
Social justice
Global health
Higher education
International philanthropy
International relations
Non-governmental organizations (ngos)

EMPLOYABILITY SKILLS

- Leadership
- Communication
- Language skills
- Organization
- Critical evaluation
- Cultural sensitivity
- Global competency
- Knowledge of social structures

ADDITIONAL RESOURCES

To learn more about the field and career options in Global Studies, please visit:

- English International: english-international.com
- Going Global: online.goinglobal.com
- International Development Organizations: devdir.org
- Teachers of English to Speakers of Other Languages (TESOL): tesol.org
- US Department of State Careers for Graduate Students: careers.state.gov/students

BEYOND BRANDEIS

GSAS alumni have gone on to a variety of careers including:

- Marketing and Development Associate - Jewish Family Services
- Assistant Director of Wellesley Fund - Wellesley College
- Counselor - Access to Language
- Service Coordinator - Massachusetts Migrant Education Program
- Project Associate - Center for Leadership and Management Sciences for Health
- English Instructor - SENA Bilingüe at Ministerio del Trabajo Colombia

The Graduate School of Arts and Sciences' Career Services office helps you explore career options and acquire job-search skills while at Brandeis and as you prepare to enter the workforce.

Connect with us:
brandeis.edu/gsas/career gsascareers@brandeis.edu