ABOUT THE PROGRAM

The peace, conflict and coexistence studies (PAX) minor at Brandeis University is the undergraduate component of the Slifka Program in Intercommunal Coexistence, which is housed in the International Center for Ethics, Justice and Public Life. The PAX (Latin for peace) program was founded in 1984 and initially focused on the Cold War and the nuclear threat. When the Soviet Union dissolved, attention shifted to a more universal study of coexistence and conflict resolution. The program was subsequently renamed peace, conflict and coexistence studies. PAX at Brandeis offers students opportunities and resources to explore the rich and diverse coexistence and conflict resolution fields.

What makes the program distinctive?

It is more important than ever to understand the political, economic, religious, psychological and social underpinnings of intra- and international conflict. PAX at Brandeis examines the many meanings of “security,” investigates the nature of power and political participation, contrasts “war culture” with “peace culture” and develops conflict-addressing ideas and methods that honor the integrity of all parties involved.

FAST FACTS

Current number of minors: 21

Emphasis within the minor: analysis of institutions and societies as they relate to peace, studies of inner peace and outer peace, theories of war and peace

Popular majors: anthropology, international and global studies, politics, sociology

Website: brandeis.edu/programs/peace
ACADEMICS AND RESEARCH

The Peace Room
The 2003–04 and 2004–05 “Sociology of Empowerment” classes created the Brandeis Peace Room. It is used for meditation, meetings of peace-related campus organizations and some PAX classes.

The Brandeis University Peace Monument
The Brandeis University Peace Monument (pictured on front) was dedicated in 2002, and its mission is to serve as a physical testament to the universality of peace and the diversity at Brandeis. It is located in the circular seating area linking the Usdan Student Center, the main library and Pearlman Hall, and it is surrounded by benches and a garden. In the center of the monument is a likeness in mosaic of the Picasso peace dove, the international symbol of peace. Encircling the mosaic are tiles engraved with the word “peace” in 70 languages spoken at Brandeis and other tiles representing various symbols of peace.

BEYOND THE CLASSROOM

Sorensen fellowships
These offer unique opportunities for five Brandeis sophomores and juniors to integrate coursework with summer internships in the United States and overseas. Sorensen fellows receive a $4,000 stipend to cover travel and modest living expenses.

AWARDS AND RECOGNITION

The Davis Projects for Peace
The Davis Projects for Peace is an initiative that invites undergraduates to design grassroots projects to be implemented during the summer and funds eligible projects with $10,000 in grant money. The objective is to encourage and support students who wish to create and try out their own ideas for building peace. Jonah Cohen ’10, Ned Crowley ’10 and Alex Epps ’10 were awarded such a grant for the creation of their documentary “State of Peace,” which chronicles the culture of peace that exists in Costa Rica. Shaina Gilbert ’10 was awarded a grant to launch a free day camp in Haiti, called “Empowering Through Education.” The camp serves less fortunate youth.

The Karpf and Hahn Peace Awards
The Karpf and Hahn Peace Awards are given annually to Brandeis students who wish to work toward coexistence and peaceful ways of addressing and resolving conflicts of many sorts. The awards are meant to enhance peace culture as it evolves in our society and elsewhere around the world. Award amounts ordinarily vary from $250 to $2,500 for each recipient.

Notable alumni
Benjamin Bechtolsheim ’07 is a Faiths Act Fellow, working through a fellowship program sponsored by the Tony Blair Faith Foundation and the Interfaith Youth Core. He works at the Center for Interfaith Action on Global Poverty, an international development agency in Washington, D.C. Forsan Hussein ’00 is CEO of the world-famous Jerusalem YMCA, whose peace programming he is extending and advancing.

BEYOND THE CLASSROOM

Internships
PAX students are required either to write a senior honors thesis or to do an internship in a peace-oriented organization anywhere in the world. The intern is supervised by a PAX professor or staff person, keeps a daily journal, presents and does the reading of a bibliography on the topic of the internship and its larger framework, and writes a paper of 15 to 20 pages at the end of the internship.

Study abroad
PAX encourages students to study in other countries and awards up to two PAX course credits for courses taken abroad.

AFTER BRANDEIS

Photo by Ken Schles
Office of Communications ©2013
Brandeis University E008