The MRSEC Education, Outreach and Diversity Director (A. Olivier-Mason) co-developed and co-facilitated a workshop at the 2016 Annual National Society for the Advancement of Chicanos/Latinos and Native Americans in Science (SACNAS) Conference, a scientific conference with >4K attendees from around the country, many of them from underrepresented minority backgrounds. The workshop was called, “The Essential Roadmap for Undergraduate Success in Science Research” and was created with diversity colleagues at Brown University and MIT to equip diverse undergraduates with the tools necessary for them to succeed in scientific research. There were 74 participants, including several faculty, for the 90-minute workshop. This initiative also served to introduce SACNAS Conference attendees to Brandeis and encourage them to apply to the MRSEC REU and graduate programs.
