In this work we study the emergence of chemical and physical heterogeneity from an initially homogenous system. We use an emulsion containing the Belousov-Zhabotinsky (BZ) reaction which undergoes pattern formation and eventually morphogenesis. Using the Turing mechanism we are able to characterize the patterns formed at an analytical level.