Brandeis faculty participated in the “Portal to the Public” program at the Discovery Museum in Acton. Professors Kosinski-Collins, Wade, and Chakraborty were trained as Science Communication Fellows and led workshops for Museum patrons on three separate evenings during the school year. Approximately 300 museum visitors attended these events. The fellows will lead science communication workshops at Brandeis to train post doc and graduate students.