WHAT MAKES A PLACE A “SACRED PLACE”?

What does it mean for religious practice and for the environment when Indigenous peoples say that their land, water or places are sacred?

Rosalyn LaPier, University of Montana and Harvard Divinity School, an enrolled member of the Blackfeet Nation in Montana and the Red River Métis, is an award-winning Indigenous writer, ethnobotanist, and environmental historian.