The SJSP Program is proud to announce the recipients of the 2017 Brenda Meehan Social Justice-In-Action Student Grants

Amanda Anderson
Amanda's project, “Sanaa Studio”, will showcase the artwork of up and coming Black artists at Brandeis. The project hopes to engage the entire Brandeis community and provide space for grievance and healing through art.

Marcelo Brociner & Bruna Ferranti
Marcelo and Bruna want to bring the White Ribbon Project to Brandeis and engage men on campus in conversations about harmful ideas of manhood that lead to violence against women. This project will engage campus clubs such as B.Men, Men of Color Alliance, Voicemale, club soccer team, and more.

Jonathan Goldman & Victoria St. Jean
Jonathan and Victoria's project, “Brandeis Citizenship Day”, is an event connecting the Brandeis community with the vast number of immigration resources provided by Brandeis clubs and organizations in the greater Boston area. The event will feature a panel with the ACLU, Project Citizenship, ISSO, and the Newcomer Academy.

Shikha Chandarana & Sara Kramer
Shikha and Sara's project is a 3-hour long lecture series focusing on healthcare issues in light of the new presidential administration. The talks will encompass technology, advocacy and social justice, and health and social policy. It will feature speakers from Brandeis and Heller School of Social Policy.

Justice Jam & ED 170a
Justice Jam is a two-part event series in which students from “ED 170a: Critical Perspectives in Urban Education” will share the importance of protecting public education with the larger Brandeis and Waltham community.
