Department of Classical Studies

Objectives

The Department of Classical Studies offers courses in the languages, literatures, history, and archaeology of ancient Greece and ancient Rome, two cultures that are the intellectual, social, political, legal, scientific, and artistic origin of Western civilization. Along with the Hebrew Bible, the scholarly study of these cultures, which goes back to the death of Alexander the Great, is the original subject of university study. Their brilliance and beauty have not ceased to beguile and inform students for more than two thousand years.

Undergraduate Major in Classical Studies

A major in classical studies offers the opportunity to learn about all aspects of life in Greece and Rome. Aside from its aesthetic, spiritual, moral, and intellectual value, that study can have practical use as well: for example, the study of Latin is a proven key to communication skills in English and in the Romance languages; moreover, Latin and Greek have long been, and continue to be, sources of technical concepts and vocabulary in all fields of study, from cybernetics to political economy by way of astronomy and zoology.

A major in classical studies also enhances preparation for a wide number of professional fields, including law and medicine, as well as for the graduate study of literature, history, fine arts, archaeology, anthropology, philosophy, religion, and classics itself. The requirements for the major are designed to be flexible so that individual students can focus their program around a particular interest like art and archaeology, history, or literature.

Graduate Certificate Program in Ancient Greek and Roman Studies

The department offers a five-course certificate program for students with a bachelor’s degree in any field. The program permits students who have taken RSEM 161 (The Examined Life) at the Rabbinical School and other practicing professionals in the area to continue their professional education, to gain professional development points, and to advance their school careers.

Designed to combine class experience and scholarship with experiential learning, the program allows students to make trips to various museum exhibitions, work in our Classical Artifact Research Center, learn to improve verbal and written skills, understand aesthetic creativity within the ancient world, consider the problems of historical and archaeological preservation, gain insight into archival documentation of antiquity, learn digital technologies, and gain expertise in visual media related to the ancient world (slides, digital databases, Internet resources).

How to Become a Major or Minor

Many of the courses in the Department of Classical Studies fulfill general university requirements: school distribution requirements (in three of the schools), writing-intensive course requirements, and foreign language proficiency. Classical studies affords students many opportunities to explore interdisciplinary connections between Greece and Rome and with many other civilizations, both ancient and modern. Besides the intense study of two ancient languages and literatures, the department offers comprehensive courses in the art, archaeology, and history of the Greeks and Romans. We encourage students who have had some background in Greek and Latin to resume their study of those languages as soon as possible after entering Brandeis, as those skills are more difficult to retrieve after a passage of time. Brandeis has a placement test to determine the level of instruction at which a student should begin his/her study of Latin. The test, which cannot be “self-scored,” can be downloaded from the Web site of the Office of the University Registrar; follow the submission directions indicated. Students who have had no background in Greek or Latin languages should try to begin one of them as soon as possible after entering Brandeis. Each is a window on an entire civilization.

How to Be Admitted to the Graduate Program

Candidates for admission should have a bachelor’s degree in any subject. The general requirements for admission to the Graduate School, specified in an earlier section of the Bulletin, apply to candidates for admission to graduate study in ancient Greek and Roman studies. Admission decisions are based primarily on the candidate’s undergraduate academic record, two letters of recommendation, and the personal statement that is part of the application form. Applicants to the certificate program need not have completed an undergraduate major in classics. Students are encouraged, though not required, to visit the campus and to talk to the director of the program.
Requirements for the Minor

Five courses are required for the minor. These may be any combination of ancient language courses at level 30 or higher and any CLAS or cross-listed courses. Three of the five courses in the minor must be taught by members of the Department of Classical Studies.

Requirements for the Major

A. Required of all majors: A minimum of nine semester courses in classical studies, to include one course in Greek or Latin, level 30 or higher; one course in history appropriate for the language chosen (for Greek, CLAS 100a; for Roman, HIST 103a); one course in the art and archaeology of the appropriate culture (for Greek, CLAS 133a; for Roman, CLAS 134b).

B. Graduation with honors in classical studies may be achieved by completing a senior essay in one semester (CLAS 99a or b; or GRK 97a or b) or by taking a year-long course (CLAS 99d or LAT 99d or GRK 99d) culminating in a senior thesis. One semester course credit from this year-long two-semester course may be counted toward the nine required courses with the consent of the thesis adviser.

C. We strongly urge classical studies majors to work in both Greek and Latin languages, as both define our field of study. In special circumstances students may petition for exemptions within the spirit of the disciplines of classical studies. We encourage students to think creatively about their programs. An approved summer archaeological excavation, study tour, or museum internship, completed for credit, may be counted as fulfilling one course requirement for the major. The education program can provide licensure (formerly certification) for teaching Latin and classical humanities in high schools in Massachusetts and several other states, including Connecticut and New York. Such licensure can be obtained concurrently with the Brandeis bachelor’s degree by additionally completing approved courses in the education program. Interested students should meet with the director of the education program early in their course of study to ensure sufficient time to take the course sequence.

Classical studies majors must choose one of three tracks of study. The first track in classics includes both Greek and Latin, languages and literatures, whereas the second track in Greek literature requires just one core language and literature. The third track in classical archaeology and ancient history places less emphasis on language and more upon courses in ancient history, ancient art, and archaeology. With departmental approval, various archaeological excavation programs may be substituted for some required courses.

Classics Track

A. Five additional language courses numbered 30 or higher with at least two in each language (Greek and Latin).

B. A second survey in Greek or Roman history. If CLAS 100a (Greek History) completed the core requirement, HIST 103a (Roman History) must also be taken, and vice versa.

Greek or Latin Literature Track

A. Three semester courses in Greek or Latin numbered 30 or higher.

B. A combination of three semester courses selected from courses taught in or cross-listed by the Department of Classical Studies, where such courses have a significant classical component, as approved by the student's departmental adviser.

Classical Archaeology and Ancient History Track

A. A second survey in Greek or Roman history. If CLAS 100a (Greek History) completed the core requirement, HIST 103a (Roman History) must also be taken, and vice versa.

B. A second survey in the art and archaeology of Greece or Rome. If CLAS 133a (Greek Art) completed the core requirement, CLAS 134b (Roman Art) must also be taken, and vice versa.

C. A topics course (CLAS 115b, CLAS 145b, etc.).

D. A combination of three semester courses selected from courses taught in or cross-listed by the Department of Classical Studies, where such courses have a significant classical component, as approved by the student’s departmental adviser.

Independent Interdisciplinary Major in Classical and English Literature

A student interested in an Independent Interdisciplinary Major in classical and English literature may petition for such through the Office of Academic Services. Generally, an independent major in classical and English literature requires a minimum of five courses in English, five courses in Greek and/or Latin at level 30 or higher, and a senior essay.

Requirements for the Graduate Certificate in Ancient Greek and Roman Studies

Program of Study

A. One core course: The graduate-level capstone course (CLAS 250b) is offered in alternate years in the spring semester and can be taken anytime in the two-and-a-half-year cycle.

B. Four electives: Four additional undergraduate courses from a selection of regularly offered undergraduate courses in the Department of Classical Studies, which may include independent study. Faculty in the Department of Classical Studies must teach at least three of the required five courses. A course covering another ancient civilization may be chosen (in consultation with the program chair) as one or two of the electives counting toward the five courses required for the certificate. N.B.: Students will be expected to fulfill graduate-level requirements in all courses taken.

C. Optional experiential component: A graduate course in Directed Study (CLAS 251a) is also offered to students who complete some approved experiential summer study and may serve as one of the four required elective courses.

Residence Requirement

There are no residency requirements.

Language Requirement

There is no foreign language requirement, although courses in Latin and Greek (above level 30) may be taken toward completion of the certificate.

Note: All classical studies courses (CLAS) are taught in English and assigned reading materials are in English.

CLAS 150a Pompeii: Life in the Shadow of Vesuvius [hum ca] This course may not be repeated for credit by students who took CLAS 145b in spring 2005. Examines Pompeii and Herculaneum, buried by Vesuvius in 79 CE, using the ancient cities’ architecture, art, and wall writings to understand the social, political, economic, and religious realities of Roman life on the Bay of Naples, especially in the first century CE. Usually offered every third year. Ms. Koloski-Ostrow

CLAS 150b Roman Decadence: Latin Literature in Translation [hum] Famous Roman texts (200 BCE–200 CE) are read from social, historical, psychological, literary, and religious viewpoints. The concept of “Roman decadence” is challenged both by the Roman literary accomplishment itself and by its impact on subsequent periods. Usually offered every third year. Ms. Koloski-Ostrow

CLAS 171a Greek Epic and Athenian Drama [hum] Surveys Greek epic poetry and the tragic and comic drama produced in the city-state of Athens (Aeschylus, Sophocles, Euripides, and Aristophanes). The intention is to convey the place of these works in the social, political, religious, and intellectual life of ancient Greece as well as their enduring universality. Usually offered every fourth year. Mr. Muellner

CLAS 171b Roman Tragedy: Greek Influence and Latin Innovation [hum] Surveys the development of the Latin tragedy from Latin adaptations of Greek plays to Latin new creations. Usually offered every other year. Mr. Muellner

CLAS 172a Greek Tragedy from Aeschylus to Brecht [ca hum] Aims to familiarize students with Greek tragedy while raising a series of questions about its function as a literary genre and as a public medium in the religious and political context of fifth-century BCE democratic Athens. Special two-time offering: fall 2007 and fall 2008. Ms. Visvardi

CLAS 172b Roman Tragedy: Greek Influence and Latin Innovation [ca hum] Aims to familiarize students with Latin tragedy while raising a series of questions about its function as a literary genre and as a public medium in the religious and political context of first-century BCE democratic Rome. Special two-time offering: fall 2007 and fall 2008. Ms. Visvardi

CLAS 180a Lovers, Tyrants, and Other Enemies: Greek Tragedy from Aeschylus to Brecht [ca hum] An exploration of dance and dance culture in classical Athens through the different genres of choral poetry, tragedy, and comedy that incorporate choruses. Also considers philosophical texts that reflect on the origins and role of choral performance. Investigates the occasions that call for choral performance, the identity of the dancers, the ethical, political, and philosophical messages of the poetry that accompanies their performance, and the role that the community attributes to their dance. Discusses how philosophers view choral performance and examines the relation between ethical cultivation, political indoctrination, and the natural power of dance. Special two-time offering: spring 2008 and spring 2009. Ms. Visvardi
