Forgiveness, Reconciliation and Restorative Justice
A panel discussion featuring Richman Fellow Rev. Jeffrey Brown

What is being done around work with forgiveness, reconciliation, and restorative justice in Boston and at Brandeis University? How can you be a part of it?

Reverend Jeffrey Brown (pictured) is the founder of RECAP (Rebuilding Every Community Around Peace) and a key community leader responsible for what the New York Times called the “Boston Miracle,” when the youth homicide rate declined from a high of 73 deaths (1990) to zero (1995–1998).

Robert Lewis is the President of the Board of the Values over Violence Institute. He is Founder and COO of Pathway to Redemption, a re-entry program empowering and uplifting the lives of returning citizens, families and the community.

Sheila McMahon, PhD is the Director of Sexual Assault Services and Prevention at Brandeis University.

Rodney L. Petersen, PhD serves as executive director of The Lord’s Day Alliance of the U.S., and as executive director of Cooperative Metropolitan Ministries in Boston.
