

Brandeis University - Office of Academic Services
Roosevelt Fellow Position Description & Application Process
Spring 2026

Roosevelt Fellows are a group of approximately 10-12 junior and senior peer academic advisors who provide an informed, accessible peer perspective on Brandeis academics. This prestigious leadership position bears the name of Eleanor Roosevelt, an early teacher, trustee, and friend of Brandeis University.

Roosevelt Fellows serve as go-to student leaders on campus, providing one-on-one academic advising to all undergraduates. They proactively outreach to new first-year and transfer students. Roosevelt Fellows are trained to advise students on topics such as academic planning and decision making, course selection, academic policies, and making use of campus resources. Their work supports the Academic Advising team within Academic Services. Roosevelt Fellows also host and participate in academic programs throughout the year and create innovative campus resources.

Roosevelt Fellows are known for their commitment to advising students across all academic interests and for their expertise coaching students through academic decisions. Through their work, Fellows promote the values of academic exploration, school/life balance and use of resources.

Responsibilities of the Roosevelt Fellow:

Time Commitment

- Serve for the entire academic year (therefore, you may not participate in study abroad during your time as a Roosevelt Fellow, or plan to graduate early).
- Spend an average of 2-5 hours per week completing position-related tasks, and slightly more during peak times such as the summer, fall or spring registration periods.
- Training will be done in both synchronous and asynchronous formats. Roosevelt Fellows must be available for summer training (held asynchronous and remotely in June and July) and specific academic orientation events. Roosevelt Fellows have a mandatory in person training in late August just before first year orientation (therefore, you may not serve in another Orientation-related position at the same time, such as an OL).

Advising

- Correspond via email with a caseload of 80-100 new student advisees across all academic interests during the summer prior to course registration and the academic year.
- Hold academic advising appointment hours during the semester (depending on need and the size of the team), in person or virtually.

- Collaborate with Academic Advisors and Front desk staff to address student inquiries.
- Correspond with advisees monthly through engaging emails with advising information.
- Take initiative to develop relationships with advisees, encouraging individual meetings and follow up.
- Record notes from advising conversations and emails in an accurate and timely manner.
- Uphold student privacy when discussing sensitive information.

Programming

- Develop and execute regular academic programs across campus such as “Roosevelt Recommends” prior to registration periods and “Hidden Gems” to introduce students to faculty and departments they may not be aware of.
- Assist with and facilitate Academic Services programs and initiatives such as advising webinars, student panels and staff interviews/training.
- Serve on committees to assist with event planning, social media outreach and resource creation.

Administrative and Teamwork

- Participate in weekly team meetings for program planning, troubleshooting, committee updates, and continuing training. No more than one missed meeting per semester is allowed and should be arranged in advance whenever possible.
- Attend 1:1 meetings with the program supervisor at least once per semester.
- Serve on a committee (social media, events, or resource/outreach), setting goals and priorities as a group.
- Provide input into the selection process for the following year’s team.
- Work as part of a larger body of student leaders including Orientation Leaders, Community Advisors, Undergraduate Department Representatives, and Hiatt Advisors, whose collaborative goal is to meet the needs of students.

Qualifications:

Eligible Fellows must be members of the class of 2027 and 2028 (sophomores and juniors at the time of application) currently in good academic standing. There is no GPA cutoff for this position.
