Brian Egede-Pedersen holds an MA in History (major) and English (minor) from the University of Southern Denmark. Since graduating in 2009, he has spent most of his time working as an educator in his native Denmark's upper secondary school sector, winning the national Teacher of the Year Award in 2017. In addition, Brian has been an assistant professor at the University of Southern Denmark, teaching the course "The Appropriation and Communication of History," written textbooks, and worked as a consulting editor for the Danish Ministry of Education. Recent and upcoming publications include topics such as Finnish Tolkien Metal and how to use memes to teach digital literacy to teenagers. When he is not in the classroom, Brian studies the representation and misrepresentation of the past in not only metal, but in extremist memes and manifestos as well.
