Analysis of COVID-19 Related Deaths among Jews in the United States

Among the 200,000 Americans who have died because of the COVID-19 virus, we estimate that there are at least 5,000 members of the US Jewish community. This estimate is based on state-by-state analysis of COVID deaths and infections. American Jews tend to be concentrated in states that have the highest per capita rates. Five thousand deaths represents ~80% of the estimated number if Jews were affected at the same rate as the population as a whole.
