Thanks to IMPACT's work in promoting the power of arts, culture, and conflict transformation, we extend an invitation to participants to share work in other media as well. This invitation is aimed at fostering a platform where elders in the arts, culture, and conflict transformation (acct) ecosystem and related fields can learn from one another's experiences. We hope to hear in particular from both younger participants and funders, and policymakers to explore key concepts in the acct ecosystem: resistance, re-humanization, and healing.

IMPACT would like to invite artists, cultural workers, conflict transformation practitioners, researchers, and activists to join our learning exchange. This will be hosted in both English and Spanish and will allow people from across the globe to contribute their thoughts in writing to prompts, questions, and each other's responses. The exchange will be open to everyone, including those who may not be able to attend in person.

Our steadfast supporter, Elaine Reuben '63, is supporting this relaunch as well as productions of sub-titled versions of the documentary in Spanish, Arabic, Hebrew, Sinhala, Tamil, and Japanese. These are available through the ReCAST website.

The ATWS relaunch team invites you to visit our new website, where you can access to downloading the full documentary, videos, and print materials designed for trainers. The film features works by artists and scholars who have contributed their insights to the acct ecosystem. The trailer was a great tool for advocacy for art just like I advocated for art in my time as a student. From a producer's perspective, I've learned through the film that the artist and the spectator, the oppressor and the oppressed, the politician and the common man, are tremendously moved by the documentary that people are moved by the injustice and the integrity and the story. It is clear from responses to the documentary that people are opened by the stories and the detail in the film at a critical juncture in our times. I'd like to express my gratitude to everyone who has contributed to the film.

Please join the launch of Acting Together on the World Stage: Performance and the Creative Transformation of Conflict, and take a moment to visit our new website! The website offers information, resources for teaching and learning, links, and printable documents including guidelines for story circles, handouts on the arts and conflict transformation ecosystem, and two-volume anthologies. The website also offers an online platform for partnering to host this exchange on the arts and conflict transformation ecosystem. Our goal is to connect with people from across the globe and to encourage them to act together on the world stage.
